The pedagogy of the schools of Reggio Emilia have been a strong influence on many educational programs throughout the world, including Canada.

General Overview

This experience provides participants with an overview of the Reggio Emilia educational project, a particular teaching approach that has been developed in Reggio Emilia, Italy. We will be looking at the history of the approach, including its socio-cultural context. Its values and pedagogical principles will be explored. This week-long study tour to Reggio Emilia that will include lectures, cultural encounters, and visits to the infant/toddler, preschool, and elementary classrooms.

Study Group Program

Study groups meet at the Loris Malaguzzi International Centre and have access to the Centre's resources including the exhibition hall, the auditorium and meeting rooms, the atelier/workshop spaces, and the Centre for Documentation and Educational Research. The Study Group program includes:

- History of the Reggio Emilia educational project and projections toward the future
- Visits to preschools and infant-toddler centres of the Municipality of Reggio Emilia Istituzione*
- Presentations/seminars by pedagogistas, teachers, and atelieristas on the values and principles of the Reggio philosophy
- Presentations of research projects carried out in the Reggio Emilia infant-toddler centres and preschools
- Topics including the image of the competent child; teachers as researchers; observation; interpretation and documentation; children with special rights; the role of the environment; the pedagogy of listening; material and the 100 languages of children; parents' involvement in the life of the school; and Remida Recycling Centre for recycled materials
- Time and space to interact with other participants and Reggio educators on specific occasions when opportunities will be given to dialogue and exchange experiences and reflections
- Cultural encounters within the city of Reggio Emilia

The program gives visibility to the values of the philosophy through a combination of visits to schools, presentations, meetings, and exchanges of experiences. Large group sessions are balanced with smaller ones. These take the following forms:

- Orientation session and plenary session
- Visitations to schools*
- Presentations by Reggio educators
- Reflection groups
- Spontaneous or self-scheduled interest evening discussion groups - group size varies
- Dinners with friends and colleagues for debriefing and sharing ideas
- Conversations with educators in schools - can be 1-on-1 or slightly larger (translators are present in each school to facilitate these exchanges)

The infant-toddler centres do not permit visitors while class is in session; therefore, visitation is usually in the early evening. Often parent representatives as well as educators are present. Study tour participants typically visit a preschool while class is in session.* This visit consists of a meeting with some of the school's educators to understand a little about the unique history and context of that school, followed by about 1 1/2 hours of observation in the school. Then the group reconvenes for questions and discussion with the educators.

the nature of visits to schools will be dependent on pandemic status at the time*

Study group schedules are full days; typically the day begins at 8:30 and ends between 5:30-7:30 pm with a lunch break midday. Some evening options are scheduled as well.
